

Open Access FAQs

Which Policy Press journals accept Open Access article submissions?

All of our journals accept Open Access submissions.

What is Open Access?

With Green OA authors publish in a journal and then self-archive a version of the article for gratis public use in a repository, subject to a number of restrictions. Green Open Access Archiving has already been possible for some time with Policy Press, for more information see our policy on self-archiving and institutional repositories at <http://policypress.co.uk/self-archiving>.

With Gold OA authors publish in a journal under a creative commons licence. The Publisher makes the article freely available for all readers, and the article can be freely copied, distributed, and re-used according to the type of creative commons licence applied. This method is usually subject to an Article Processing Charge (APC).

How does an author submit an Open Access article to a Policy press journal?

You should submit your article in exactly the same way as usual, following the instructions on the journal website. There is no need to highlight that you wish the article to be Open Access until the article has been accepted for publication.

What is the author fee for Open Access publication?

The standard Policy Press fee for making articles Open Access is £1,500. This fee is known as an Article Processing Charge (APC). Policy Press offers a number of APC discounts. For further information please see: <http://policypress.co.uk/open-access>.

How is the APC determined?

The APC reflects the cost of managing and resourcing the publishing process, including peer review, copy-editing, production, distribution and hosting.

How do I pay the APC?

UK customers can pay by credit/debit card through our online shop. All customers can request an invoice. To request an invoice, please email pp-journals@bristol.ac.uk.

Can I have a discount on the APC?

We are pleased to be able to offer the following discounts:

- Author from the University of Bristol: 30%
- Author from institution subscribing to the Policy Press Collection or Mix & Match 7 Policy Press Journals: 20%
- First author from country in Medium Human Development category of UN HDI: 50%
- First author from country in Low Human Development category of UN HDI: 100%

If I go for Gold OA, can I choose which CC-BY licence is applied to my work?

Yes. You can see the licences to choose from at <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/>. Your funding body may insist your work is published under a specific CC-BY licence – do check! Email us (pp-journals@bristol.ac.uk) to let us know which licence you'd like us to use for your work.

What is the difference between “free” content and an “Open Access” article?

Free content is not supported by Article Processing Charges, and is made free at the discretion of Policy Press. Open Access articles are often supported by Author Processing Charges and are permanently free for all to access and re-use, under a creative commons licence.

Is the peer review process different for Open Access articles compared to traditional articles?

No. All Policy Press journals have the same high standard of peer review for all content submitted, regardless of Open Access status. The Open Access status of an article has no bearing on the decision to accept or reject a submission.

How does a reader access an Open Access article?

Readers will continue to access all Policy Press content through the Ingenta Connect platform. Open Access articles will be labelled as Open Access and available to all readers, regardless of their subscription base.

How do I cite an Open Access article?

You should cite an Open Access article in exactly the same way as a normal article.

Can I put my article into a repository?

If you have gone down the Gold route and paid the Article Processing Charge, you can put your article into a repository straight away.

If you have not paid the Article Processing Charge (this is the Green route), you can post your final submitted version (post peer review but pre-copy editing and typesetting) into a repository subject to the following conditions:

- embargoed for 12 months after publication in an issue of the journal;
- on a not-for-profit server (ie personal website, institutional server, not-for-profit subject based servers);
- must be clearly identified as the author's post-print version and state that it is not to be cited;
- with full referencing and online link to the final published Definitive Version of scholarly record (currently held on Policy Press' behalf by Ingenta) with acknowledgement wording.

For acknowledgement wording and further information please see our policy on self-archiving and institutional repositories.

Who should I contact if I have more questions?

Please email pp-journals@bristol.ac.uk.
